Academic ProjectFast Detection of Transformed Data Leaks

The leak of sensitive data on computer systems poses a serious threat to organizational security. Statistics show that the lack of proper encryption on files and communications due to human errors is one of the leading causes of data loss.

We provide a technique for transformed data leakage detection using Levenshtein distance algorithm and we add realistic but fake object to the original file to detect the guilty agent who leaked the data file.

Student Fee Management:

Nowadays everywhere automation of human task has taken place. It is a desktop application with easy and efficient user interface using which one can manage student data for various course and keep track on students data such as fees paid, remaining fees, course opted, generate final report of student and many more provisions required. All the data management tasks for both the projects were implemented using Microsoft SQL Server 2008 tool as a back end.
